

A HOME TOWN PAPER FOR HOME TOWN PEOPLE

VOL. XXVI

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, SAN MATEO COUNTY, CAL., FRIDAY, AUGUST 22, 1919.

NO. 34

LOW PRICES ON FOOD FIXED BY GOV'T

ORDERS TAKEN AT POSTOFFICE FOR ARMY SURPLUS GOODS AT LOW FIGURES; DELIVERY TO BEGIN HERE NEXT WEEK.

The list of articles of food that can be obtained through the mail in the campaign recently started to sell the army and navy surplus stores and reduce the cost of living is published below. As will be seen, the list is comprehensive, taking in many food staples. Postmaster Sink stated today that South San Francisco was more fortunate in the supplies allotted to it than most towns of the county because of its being a branch of the San Francisco office. For that reason, too, a better rate of delivery obtains here, one-half a cent a pound bringing the goods from the city, while in other near-by county towns the rate is $1.35 or more a hundredweight.

Postmaster Sink has already received orders here that total several hundred dollars, while more are expected within the next few days. Deliveries will start next week.

Here is the list of articles for sale, and the price per can or pound and per case. All goods must be purchased in case lots.

AND NO KIDDIE HAS BEEN HEARD TO OFFER OBJECTION

Once more the opening of school has been postponed. On account of the paving work being done in the yard of the grammar school it was deemed better last Monday to postpone the opening a week, and as the cement is not yet ready another postponement of one week has been decided upon.

WESTERN MEAT ENORMOUS PLANT

HUGE PROPORTIONS OF PACKING INDUSTRY SUGGESTED BY TRIP THROUGH LOCAL INDUSTRIAL PLANT; EVERYTHING SPOTLESS.

LITTLE JOURNEYS THROUGH THE INDUSTRIAL PLANTS OF SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, THE HOME OF MANUFACTURING INTERESTS.

The story of the Western Meat Company is pretty nearly the story of the city of South San Francisco, for the packing company established its plant here twenty-seven years ago, while the town was in its infancy. As the city has grown to its present size of nearly 6000 population, the packing plant has prospered and expanded until today it employs about 550 people with a monthly payroll of $50,000. In the great plant at present 45,000 cattle, 225,000 sheep and about 255,000 hogs are slaughtered yearly. So great has the business of the plant grown that a clerical force of 170 persons is employed in its San Francisco office.

The Western Meat plant is under the superintendency of J. O. Snyder, who recently celebrated his twenty-fifth year with the company. He has been superintendent at the local plant for fifteen years and the business has grown and prospered under his care. From all over the Pacific Coast states livestock comes to the Western Meat plant. There are many acres of pens for their reception, ninety-nine corrals in all, according to Foreman Sullivan, who has charge of the stock. There is an enormous barn for the corrals for the storage of hay. In the stockyards are hospitals for the care of such animals as may be ailing. There is a scale with a capacity of 120,000 pounds—everything is on a large plan.

The packing plant is across the road and railroad track from the yards, the livestock being conveyed to it by a big runway built high overhead.

About seventy-five men are engaged in the killing and dressing of the animals. And the dispatch, the efficiency with which the work is handled is astonishing. His guides, Max Dewese and Patrick Bowler, assured the writer that from the blow of the ham-

CITY TO GIVE A WELCOME HOME

SERVICE MEN OF COMMUNITY INVITED TO MEET AT CITY HALL MONDAY NIGHT AND HELP PLAN CELEBRATION.

The city of South San Francisco is to have a "welcome home" celebration all its own some time before the county and state event planned on the date set by Governor Stephens, September 25th. This was brought out at the meeting of the city trustees Monday night. All men of this community who served in the war in army, navy or marines are invited to attend a meeting at the city hall next Monday night, at which time plans for the affair will be made. It is hoped a large turn-out of ex-service men will be on hand to talk the matter over. It is believed a day long to be remembered in South San Francisco will be the outgrowth of the gathering. The people of this region have waited many months for the opportunity to publicly express their appreciation to the men who went to fight the Hun, but no chance has presented itself before. Such a welcome home has been suggested from time to time, but always it has been felt that the event should not take place till all the boys had returned.

Chief of Police C. C. Conrad had his salary raised from $125 to $150 a month at Monday night's meeting. The officer's request for the increase was granted without a dissenting vote. Later in the evening City Clerk W. J. Smith asked that his salary as deputy city tax collector be raised $20 a month. Action by the board was laid over till the next meeting. If the clerk's request receives favorable consideration, as there seems every prospect it will, the increase will take effect September 1st. Several members of the board, speaking informally, stated they believed this city has one of the most competent clerks and deputy tax collectors in the county and that this official fully deserves the raise he asked. Mr. Smith has been clerk of South San Francisco for eleven years.

A matter that created considerable stir of interest at the meeting was brought to the board's attention by Judge E. E. Cunningham. It concerned Joe Castro, one of South San Francisco's soldiers recently committed to the state hospital at Ukiah as being of unsound mind. Judge Cunningham gave a brief sketch of Castro's case. The young soldier was in several actions. In July of last year he was gassed, while at Chateau Thierry he was shot in the forehead over the left eye. This was September 26th. Within the next few weeks Castro was sent from one hospital to another, five in all, in France, but nothing was done to take out the bullet. He reached Letterman Hospital, San Francisco, December 14th, where the bullet was extracted from inside the skull near the left ear. Later he suffered severe headaches and short periods of mental derangement that unfitted him for work, although he was discharged, or for taking vocational training. Finally he was sent to the asylum at Ukiah. An eminent surgeon of San Francisco has expressed the opinion that an operation might relieve pressure on the boy's brain and cure his suffering and mental condition. The board was asked to address a letter to the super-

ALL IS READY FOR THE BIG CAMPAIGN

Workers for Funds for the Y. M. C. A. Will Start Canvassing Monday; Every Person Should Help.

The big campaign to raise funds in this city for the establishment and maintenance here of Y. M. C. A. social rooms and recreation grounds is to be launched next Monday. The field has been carefully gone over by a committee of local business men, the city has been divided into precincts, each precinct has been assigned to a team of workers, and a captain or leader has been appointed to have charge of each team. The entire organization of workers and captains is in charge of Dr. F. S. Dolley, and every possible step has been taken to make the canvass of the town thorough. As in wartime campaigns the list of the residents of the town has been scanned, and those competent to know each person's resources has assigned a certain amount that each should give, and every person will be approached for that amount.

While this is the formal start of the campaign, much work has already been done. The heads of the big industrial plants have been approached, and practically every one has given a generous pledge of financial support to the movement that will mean so much to them, to this city as a whole, and to every resident in the town. Many of the larger plants have pledged $100 a month to have the "Y" work carried on here.

The plan has been followed of getting the pledges from the factories first, that the other business men of the town might be solicited for what remains of the amount that must be raised. Approximately $7500 in all must be obtained for the starting of the "Y" work here, and already the big fellows have agreed to furnish nearly two-thirds of that amount. This leaves a comparatively small sum for the smaller business men to make up. No dissenting voice has been heard as to the benefit this city and its residents will derive from the Y. M. C. A. work in South San Francisco and it is confidently believed that little difficulty will be experienced in raising the entire amount.

LADIES' AID PLANS FOOD SALE.

The Ladies' Aid will hold a food sale at Carmody's store Saturday afternoon, August 30th, at 2 o'clock. Cakes, pies, cookies, salads, etc., will be sold.

WESTERN MEAT PLANT.

mer or stroke of the knife that killed the animal to the entrance of its dressed carcass into the cooling room took for a sheep only about one minute, for a beef about five, for a hog about seven.

Those who remember "hog-killing" days down on the farm, with the attendant task of scraping the porker, a process that took an hour or two with all hands working, should see the apparatus that removes piggie's bristles in a modern packing plant. A box-like enclosure receives the carcass on a slow-moving cable that has already brought it through the scalding tank. In this box are many large revolving paddles or flappers that roll his pigskin about, slap and rub and scrub him till he emerges much more thoroughly scraped than ever the job was done on the farm.

All slaughtered animals are under rigid inspection by federal officers. The livers, the heads, the body as a whole are carefully examined, and should any part show the least trace of infection of any kind it is held for further and more careful examination or condemned and sent to the fertilizer works.

From the killing floor all carcasses go to the cooling room, where in a low temperature they cool for forty-eight hours; then they are cut up. Probably you did not realize that the ham from which you ate a slice at breakfast was cut from the rest of the body by a band saw as though it were a stick of wood, but such is the case. Down from the cooling room to the floor below through a chute—all conveying here seems to be done by chute, endless chain, or pipe; quickly, silently, without loss of motion—comes the hog's body, split in halves lengthwise. At a table by a rapidly moving band saw stands a man. Zip, the hind leg is off. Z-i-p, the ham has been removed. Z-i-i-i-p, the saw cuts its way lengthwise between spine and belly. In a twinkling the carcass is in many pieces, each piece taken charge of by a man armed with a knife, who with a motion or two has still further trimmed it and placed it in an iron wagon shaped like a huge coal scuttle. Each piece goes to a certain man and a certain wagon, thence to its destination in sausage room, pickling room, rendering room, etc. In every part of the plant the same specialization of work is noticeable; each worker, man or woman, does one thing, and with constant practice does that thing with all possible skill and elimination of unnecessary motions.

Because of the many processes through which they are put it is interesting to follow some of the parts of a hog through their wanderings in the big plant.

Each ham before being packed away is treated with a mixture of salt, sugar, and saltpeter. This is injected in around the bone by a pump, the hose from which is armed with a long, sharp, hollow needle. The mixture is made according to a set formula, and that each "shot" may be full, an ingenious arrangement automatically locks the pump handle if anything less than a full stroke is attempted. The hams are then packed away to cure in hogsheads that hold 1400 pounds each. Thousands of hams are shipped weekly in refrigerator cars capable of holding 40,000 pounds of meat. A car was being loaded the afternoon this trip was taken. Inside the carefully lined cars, with every precaution of cleanliness, the hams were being packed loose in salt that the curing may continue en route to distributing points.

The sides of bacon are packed in square vats in the sugar curing room. Each is treated with the sugar mixture, the vats being fitted with loose covers that are put under pressure, the meat curing in its own juices for from three to four weeks.

In another room "Italian hams" are being cured for "pershuti." These are treated with pepper, salt, and sugar and eaten without cooking after a dry-curing process taking thirty days to complete.

Up several flights of stairs, along a couple of corridors, and we found ourselves in the sausage room. Hugh machines, overgrown replicas of those to be found in most kitchens, were grinding scraps and trimmings into filling for the sausage skins taken from the slaughtered animals and cleaned and sterilized until white as snow. The skins are filled under pressure, pass to a table where girls separate the links by "spinning" four-inch sections, then are hung on traveling racks to be cured. One enters a sausage room with popular rumors and stories of the composition of sausage meat in mind, but he comes away more than satisfied, for no stray dog collars are to be found; in fact, everything is the last word in cleanliness and no fault could be found with any scrap of meat that is used.

The cold storage rooms came in for their share of inspection. Here a temperature of 10 degrees above zero is maintained.

"The secret of successful refrigeration is an absolutely dry cold," declared Patrick Bowler, and the temperature was certainly low enough to suit the writer. After inspecting a dozen or more cold storage rooms, where every pipe carrying the frigid water was covered thick with frost, he was more than glad to get back to the warmth and sunlight outside. One storage room was especially interesting, for there hung half and quarter carcasses destined for army and navy consumption, each piece carefully draped in cheesecloth, then in burlap.

An intricate system of accounting prevails in the storage rooms, each ham, loin, side of bacon or case of canned product being carefully checked in, then checked out again when it leaves.

Here and there scattered about among the cold storage rooms are "jails," each locked and the key in the possession of the omnipresent United States inspectors. These are for pieces of the carcasses held for further examination by these officials.

So many and varied are the activities in the big plant that only a few can be treated in this article. The "wool pullery," the fertilizer plant and the glue factory must go over to another issue. But it would be an incomplete story indeed that made no mention of the section of the plant where the butter substitutes are made, Calinut, Tastigood, and similar articles. Of all the cleanly plant this room is perhaps the most spotless. Everywhere one turns one is confronted by a sign, "Keep Your Hands and Clothes Clean." Only vegetable oils go into these butter substitutes, and the product looks, tastes, and smells more like butter than butter itself often does.

In the interests of cleanliness the employees of the plant are required to put on a clean outfit of clothing every morning. The clothes of the day before are washed free of charge by the company in its own complete steam laundry.

This entire issue of The Enterprise would scarce suffice for a list of the different departments and subdepartments at the big meat plant. It has its own ice factory, its own box factory, and its own machine and blacksmith shops. At its cafeteria meals are served to employees at cost and are said to be excellent. In the dining room rows of tables will seat 168 persons at a time.

Below the dining room are the reading, billiard, and card rooms of the Welfare Club; its dressing rooms, its shower baths, its swimming tank 65x 28 feet in extent filled with heated water that is changed every day. In the yard outside are tennis and basketball courts. Entertainments are staged in the club rooms at regular intervals, social gatherings among the employees are held there, and altogether, after a trip through the plant and its environs, one brings away the idea that an employee is fortunate to be working for the Western Meat Company.

intendent at Ukiah and ask if a specialist would be allowed to give Castro a thorough examination if such physician were sent there at the expense of this city. The board agreed to do this or anything within its power to help the unfortunate young man and restore him to his health and family. Judge Cunningham has interested himself in the case and agreed to draw up the letter in conjunction with the city clerk.

In the early part of the meeting the trustees sat as a board of equalization, during which they accepted the assessment roll as prepared by the deputy tax collector. An opportunity was given anybody who wished to protest against the assessment placed upon his property, but no such protestant appeared.

A petition from Manuel Monize to conduct a poolroom at 250 Grand avenue was granted.

Several bills against the city were read and ordered paid.

YOUNG PEOPLE OF THIS CITY ATTEND PARTY IN PITTSBURG

A number of young people from this city attended a house party given at the Los Medanos hotel in Pittsburg, Calif., by Mrs. N. A. Becker in honor of her son, Albert, who will soon return to the university at Santa Clara. Saturday evening was spent in dancing. Sunday the guests were entertained with a launch ride on the Sacramento river. They were chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. Becker and Mr. and Mrs. Dunbaugh. Those who attended the party from this city were Mary Bentley, Viola Hein, Maybelle Spellman, Lolita Kelley and Beatrice Elkerenkotter, Charles Hein, James McMillis, Joshua Maule, James Smith and Byrne McSweeney. Miss Helen Dunbaugh and Thomas Becker of Pittsburg, Calif., formerly of this city, attended.

LOCAL BOYS APPEAR IN BOXING MATCHES

Jackie Quinn, a South San Francisco boy, fights Charlie Jones at San Mateo Thursday, August 28th. Quinn met Jones in this city at the last fight show of the South City Athletic Club. It was a lively go and was declared a draw. Joe Kent of this city will manage Quinn in his coming battle.

George Ryan, the big local boy hailed as the latest "white hope," won his first fight Wednesday night before the Association Club of San Francisco. Ryan knocked his opponent, George Parker, out in the second round. This was Ryan's first appearance in the ring, and those who saw the fight are more than ever confident that Ryan has a great future before him. He will fight in a preliminary bout Labor Day at Reno.

Jack Reaves, the South San Francisco glove artist who will appear in the main event at Reno September 1st, will meet Spud Murphy in the Dreamland arena of San Francisco Friday night of this week. Murphy is reported to be a good man in the ring, but local fans are confident that Reaves will have an easy victory. Reaves has given up his work with the local steel works here and will devote his entire time to boxing.

Mike Verna, a local scrapper who has made quite a name for himself by his gameness and whirlwind style, added another scalp to his string on the 14th when he knocked Jimmie McCans out in the second round at San Mateo.

HOLD CHILDREN'S PICNIC IN GOLDEN GATE PARK

Mrs. A. P. Scott and Mrs. E. N. Brown entertained in honor of the birthdays of their son and daughter, Robert Scott and Evelyn Brown. The affair took the form of a picnic in Golden Gate park. Besides the two young people who were honored the guests were Gordon Scott, Niron and Elizabeth Brown, Eleanor and Norvan Hynding, Elizabeth Coffinberry, Franklin and Sarah May Doak, Althea Spangler, Evelyn Russo, Milton, Uval, and Harold Enderlin.

Spentbound he had stood there on the stairs, a lad of fourteen, and Gunga had lifted the Thing in his arms and gone away with it; and the great figure of his father, dressed in pajamas, had stood motionless for a long time, then turning had faced the stairs and caught sight of him—and suddenly had sent a wild, unnatural laugh ringing through the house.

"You there, eh, Stacey?" he had laughed out, as though unmannered. "Well, I'll tell you something now. Never go to the East. Remember that—never go to the East."

And then he had pulled himself together, and his face had set sternly as he had pointed up the stairs. "Go back to your bed!" he had commanded sharply. "Go back to your bed instantly!"

"Yes," said Wallen aloud to himself. "That's what he said: 'Never go to the East—never go to the East.'"

But he had come to the East and six Chinamen had shipped aboard the Upolo to kill him. His father had been quite right in telling him not to go to the East. How was it that he had come there? He had run away from that gray house after that night, and he had never heard of his father since.

That was in California.

He had gone to Frisco, and gone to sea. He had been at sea ever since in all kinds of ships, and he had done pretty well. He had his master's certificate already.

But that did not account for his being here in the Java sea, and for those six Chinamen. He had been fourth officer of the Tokamaru when they had touched at Shanghai a few weeks ago. She was a fine ship, the Tokamaru, the biggest passenger liner in the fleet—only a fourth officer's pay was very small.

He had met Captain Mitchell of the Upolo ashore there, and Captain Mitchell had persuaded him to ship as first mate on the Upolo for double the pay he had been getting. The Upolo, of course, traded through the Java and Banda seas—that was what his father had meant by the East—touching at Shanghai as a port of call in a liner wasn't the same thing.

How that sun burned through the awning! It seemed to stab and drill into his skull with little shafts of exquisite pain. He could get away from it, of course, by going below into the cabin, by putting the deck between him and that torturing ball of fire, but in the cabin one couldn't breathe.

One couldn't live in the cabin—Captain Mitchell was there and Captain Mitchell was dead.

Had Captain Mitchell anything to do with those six Chinamen? Or anything to do with Drink-House Sam in Singapore? And where was it those six Chinamen had joined—at Shanghai like himself?

If he could remember that he would know whether Captain Mitchell had had a hand in the cursed game. Hadn't Johnson said something about new hands? But then native crews were everlastingly shifting about. It was a long way from Singapore to Shanghai. Who was this Drink-House Sam? What was it Ting Wah had said? "Drink-House Sam—him know."

"Him know, him know, him know"—the words began to run through his mind in a singsong, crazy fashion—and then a passionate, merciless anger seized upon him, and the splendid six-foot bulk of the man heaved up from the chair, and, clenched fist raised, he swayed upon his feet.

They had got him! Not the way they had thought to get him—but they had got him. And he could not fight—there was no one to fight—he could only die like a trapped rat, while this Drink-House Sam laughed a thousand miles away!

"Him know, him know, him know"—the words coursed like fire through his brain. He shouted aloud, and the nails of his fingers in his clenched fist bit into the palm of his hand. He could not choke the life, as his own went out, from this devil in Singapore that he had never seen—he could only die.

The uplifted arm, as though too heavy for him, fell to his side, a ghastly whiteness spread over his face, he reeled, clutched at the skylight for support, and slipped prone upon the deck. It was the nausea upon him again.

The virulence of the attack passed after a while, but for a long time he lay where he had fallen, weak and exhausted.

He was semi-delirious when he stood up again, and hung limply against the skylight. Medicine—yes, that was what it meant—that stuff there spilled all about. He put some into his mouth. His eyes fastened on the ship's log open in front of him. What kind of a book was that? What was it doing there? Had he been reading? He couldn't read when he was sick.

It was very strange. No; he remembered now, he had been writing in it. Whenever any of the crew died he wrote it down in the book.

And now the crew was all dead, and he would be dead, too, very soon; therefore he should also write his own name down while he could still write. He remembered it all perfectly now—that was what the book was for.

He lurched forward and picked up the fountain pen from where it had rolled into a broken package of powdered quinine. He lurched again heavily as he leaned over the book. A nervous twitch of his hand gouged the pen-point into the page and left a blot.

He shook his head in a gravely puzzled way. It was queer that the pen wouldn't write as it had written before; it seemed to travel all over the page, and—he paused, his hand going to his eyes again—it was strange that he couldn't think of his own name!

He was first mate, he knew that; but—yes, his name came back to him now. He wrote on laboriously. He finished the entry, dropped the pen, and stared at what he had written, nodding his head.

"Died today, S. Wallen, first mate." He read the words aloud, and nodded his head again. It was true, quite true. When that damnable sun that was tormenting him through the awning was gone, that would be the end of today and he would be dead.

His eyes strayed forward along the deck—and widened with a dawning fear. What were those shapes there! He began to mumble to himself, and suddenly shrieked out aloud. It was a horror ship.

He shrieked aloud, rushed to the rail, and in the delirium of his mind crouched low to hide himself from this dead throng that raved like demons for medicine, ran screaming forward to where the ship's boat bumped monotonously in its rise and fall against the vessel's hull.

He hurled himself over the side, cast the boat loose, and snatching at the oars began—pull-like-a-madman away from the ship. Two hundred yards off he stood up and shook both fists and yelled tauntingly—they could not reach him now. But why not? Suppose they should swim after him! He flung himself to the seat again and plied the oars furiously.

And then slowly the strokes lessened, and presently an oar fell from his grasp, and after that, with a moan, he pitched forward into the bottom of the boat—and all was blackness.

CHAPTER II.

On the Road to Pobl.

"Mon," expostulated the Scotch trader, "but you're fair daft! You're but out of the jaws of death, and I'd no say you're all the way out at that. Bide a bit, there'll be anither in a month—or in two, anyhow."

Wallen, standing in the center of the little galvanized-iron-roofed storehouse, his eyes on the native who had entered a moment before, shook his head.

"I've got to get away, MacKnight," he said earnestly. "There's no use talking about it. What kind of a ship does he say it is?"

MacKnight flung out a question in the native tongue.

"He says it is a big smoke-boat," translated the trader, "which will be by way of saying it's some measly steam coaster that's so small it's no able to accommodate its own cockroaches, d'ye mind! Mon, pay no attention to it. What's anither month or so—and you'll be strong then, and—ah, mon, but I hate to have ye go!"

Wallen, gaunt and thin from his illness, shook his head decisively again, though the other's words had brought a quick responsive smile to his lips.

Six weeks ago a proa from the village here had picked him up at sea and brought him, as it were, to this big-hearted man's door. He owed his life to MacKnight.

"It's no use, MacKnight," he answered. "I've got to go."

"It'll be that black devil in Singapore!" ejaculated the trader, screwing up his wizened face and pulling viciously at his beard. "You'll no play the fool, Wallen. It's not fit you are to go. Listen to me, mon: it's a matter o' twenty miles across the island, as ye know well, and no conveyance, ye mind. And it's no regular trader that's called, for none is due—she'll have put in for water or the like, and will be sailing again at daybreak."

"I can make it by daybreak, MacKnight," Wallen stated quietly.

For a moment MacKnight stared at Wallen, then his hands dropped from Wallen's shoulders.

"Well, go, and be damned to you, then!" he said gruffly, deep down in his throat to hide his emotion—and, turning, stepped abruptly outside.

There were not many preparations to make—very few.

Wallen's worldly possessions were his only through the generosity of the trader. But MacKnight did not stop at that now, for, five minutes later, as Wallen started for the night's tramp across the island, a Malay guide, well loaded with supplies, started with him, while MacKnight cursed with earnest profanity as they wrung each other's hand.

At the edge of the clearing Wallen looked back. On the great bearded figure that leaned against the door frame of the solitary trading station Wallen's eyes lingered.

The man waved his hand and shouted:

"Mon, ye'll no forget MacKnight o' Arrú! Ye'll no forget MacKnight, mon!"

And then suddenly a mist dimmed Wallen's eyes. He tried to shout back—and could only wave his own hand in return. And then the trees hid the trader from view.

Forget MacKnight! The man who had nursed him back to life as a mother would nurse her child! Forget that solitary human outpost of civilization—a man with an iron fist, a barbed-wire tongue and a heart as tender as a woman's! No; he would not forget MacKnight!

He forced a smile to his lips. One made strange friendships in these far parts of the world, and made them under strange circumstances. The chances were a thousand to one that he and MacKnight would never meet again—but, for all that, it was a friendship that would last.

Twenty miles across the island before daybreak!

Wallen fell to wondering what sort of a ship and, more pertinent still, what sort of a skipper was on the ship that had put into Pobl. He had refused MacKnight's offer of an advance of money, and he hadn't a penny—but he was satisfied that he would not be refused passage in any case. He could work his way.

A GREAT LIGHT DAWNS.

On the first of January, 1920, a law goes into effect by which the finance committee of the senate and the ways and means committee of the house are to form a joint committee to fix what expenditures are to be undertaken for the financial year. And when the figures have been reached, nothing can be added to them except by intervention of the President, or by a two-thirds vote of the committee.

This is better than allowing twenty different committees to authorize expenditures whenever they feel like it. It is extremely difficult to keep track of accounts in which the items total in billions. It is difficult to do these things, even when the outgoings are all recorded in one book. But when a whole library of ledgers is kept, recording the financial jazz-concerts of twenty committees, the agglomeration is simply a kaleidoscope.

No wonder that this has been the most expensively run country in the world. No wonder there have been taxes on everything from medicine to children's toys. The recently passed measure marks the beginning of a better day. When accounts are kept in such a way that we can really tell what we are spending, we will probably spend less, and need less.

We didn't try to follow the long-drawn-out Ford-Chicago Tribune million-dollar libel suit, so we have no opinion to express on the finding of the jury, but from it all we are forced to this conclusion: Ford certainly understands the value of publicity.

Tremendous crops all over the country—prices for all kinds of produce soaring to unprecedented figures! Then, applying the law of supply and demand, we suppose that if everybody in the United States were to take up farming prices would go to such a figure that nobody could afford to eat!

Help the people of Europe? Certainly we are all willing. But in the meantime there are a few of us left who would like to help the people of the United States.

The Federal Board says, "To work and to save is the remedy for the increasing cost of living." Sounds easy, but to the innocent bystander there seems something wrong with the board's logic.

Now we are told that by 1924 tobacco will also be on the prohibited list. Well, at any rate, we can roll up a devil of a lot of puffs in the five years that are left us—provided we can also dig up the price.

No, the Ohio landlord who voluntarily reduced the rent of his tenants is not a candidate for public office or matrimony. He is just living in the wrong age—an age in which the Golden Rule has been kicked into the discard and forgotten, while greed and avarice have taken its place.

All this talk about "saving Europe" bears the earmarks of a carefully staged campaign of propaganda. Some one wants to get richer quicker.

High finance is an ancient number these days. Profiteering has backed it off the stage.

No chance whatever of dying of ennui these days. When we can't have a strike we generally scare up a race riot or two.

Perhaps in time, when the President and the senate have talked themselves to death over the league of nations, the rest of us will graciously condescend to forget all about the darned thing.

Listen, mother! Just dig out those old gingham dresses you have had stored away for so many years, and your daughter will be quite stylishly dressed. Silk is only a cheap fabric these days.

A "kick," it seems, has been discovered in root beer. But then—
 All through life,
 In some way or other,
 The world has just one
 Kick after another.

We see by the papers that Sergeant York is to establish a university for the instruction of the youth of Tennessee. We presume, of course, he will shoot his ideas through the muzzle of a high-powered rifle.

There was never a time in the history of this town when the readers of this paper were so interested in the advertising columns as they are today. With prices of everything up in the clouds, the average man or woman is keenly alive to the possibility of shaving off a cent or two in the price of necessities, and watches the ads like a hawk in the hope of finding some relief. The WISE merchant takes advantage of this and places his propositions before the people each week.

If every person in this town would devote thirty minutes each week to cleaning and beautifying his premises and the public highways and vacant places we would soon be living in a veritable Garden of Eden. And it is so simple, and easy, and without material cost. But, like every other proposition in life, it requires a head, a directing genius, some one to take the lead and push it along and keep it pushing. Have we such a genius among our citizenship?

We extend our sympathy, congratulations, and commendation to our friends in congress who have given up their six weeks' vacation in order to settle the grave problems which are causing so much unrest in the country just now. We have hopes that something tangible will come out of Washington—something that will stabilize the dollar, return conditions to normal, allay the growing unrest of the people, and bring sanity out of the chaotic conditions which now surround us.

CANNING COMPOUNDS HARMFUL TO HEALTH

Housewives should not use canning compounds that are sold under various trade names for use in home canning of fruits and vegetables, because many of such compounds are harmful to health. This warning is sent out by the California State Board of Health, acting under advice from the Bureau of Chemistry of the United States Bureau of Agriculture.

These preparations contain salicylic acid or boric acid in powdered form, the use of which products is absolutely unnecessary as preservatives if proper methods of canning are followed. Furthermore, the Federal Food and Drugs Act prohibits the use of harmful preservatives in foods. These laws are identical with those in existence in nearly every State in the Union. Neither Federal nor State laws, however, apply to foods canned in the home and consumed there. Housewives must, therefore, help to maintain the health of the nation by refraining from the use of these injurious canning compounds.

Woman's World and Social

PRACTICAL RECIPES

Under this heading The Enterprise will publish, from week to week, a series of excellent recipes written especially for this paper by a woman who has had a university training in domestic science and a wide experience in cooking in her own home. Every recipe has been thoroughly tested and will be found economical and palatable.

School Lunches.

The study of foods for school children is of the greatest importance, since the foundation of physical efficiency is so often laid during these years.

Suggestions

1. No child should go to school without breakfast. Something hot and nourishing, such as cereal, should be included in the breakfast menu.
2. Avoid if possible a cold lunch.
3. Allow sufficient time for the noon meal for slow eating and sufficient mastication. The food should not be "bolted."

The School Lunch Box

1. A box should be selected that can be kept thoroughly clean and well aired.

2. Pack so the food will be appetizing when the box is opened. This is of great importance.

Use paraffin paper to wrap the food.

Use paper napkins.

Use a covered porcelain or glass cup such as a jelly glass to carry soft foods.

3. The foods should be simple, but carefully prepared and varied.

A general plan for food in lunch box:

1. Sandwiches.

Use bread twenty-four hours old or older.

Lightly butter and fill with:

Finely chopped boiled eggs, mildly seasoned.

A nut paste, such as peanut butter.

A dried fruit paste, such as chopped dates, figs or raisins.

Chopped or sliced meats.

Cheese.

Jellies.

2. Fruit.

This is appetizing, carries well and is valuable for its mineral matter, laxative effect, etc.

Fresh or stewed fruits are acceptable or fresh tomatoes for older children.

3. A sweet.

Plain cookies.

Gingerbread.

Sponge cake.

Baked custard.

Rice pudding, etc.

One or two pieces of home-made candy, stuffed dates, salted nuts, etc., will add to the attractiveness of the lunch.

4. A fluid.

Milk or fruit juice if they can be carried.

New Version of Sport Styles

Just what will happen next to sports clothes is a fascinating subject for speculation. The new weaves in silk have intrigued them into beautiful extravagances, and other unusual fabrics have lent them originality. All sorts of materials, from leather to cricket flannel, with a company of sturdy woollens forming their main dependence, invite designers to become independent. Cleverness is at a premium, nothing is considered erratic and there are sports clothes and sports clothes; some of them for actual sports wear and some of them merely versions of sport styles.

For actual sports wear, coats and skirts of wool, or heavy cotton, are plain and cut on boyish lines. Skirts wide enough and patch pockets big enough are their sensible outstanding features. The sweater and sweater-coat in greater variety than ever, reappear, entitled to more service stripes than any other garment. One of the new, short slip-on models occupies the center in the group of three sports costumes pictured here. This is a very popular model and is made in many gay and brilliant colors.

handsome suit reveals a plaited skirt of silk in which a plain satin stripe and a crepe stripe alternate, the satin stripe in white and the other in light green. The jacket, of white taffeta, has a quilted pattern on the collar and cuffs, and forming a border at the bottom, having the stitching done in green silk thread. Stitching covers the narrow belt and defines the pocket, proving a very original and beautiful embellishment.

Roshanara crepe makes the unusual dress at the right of the picture. It has a straight panel at the back but achieves the effect of a loose cut-away coat at the front, with flaring sleeves that are split up the back. Crepe georgette is used in facings that extend beyond the edges of the sleeves and coat drapery. It took audacity to add a sash of the same material as the dress, to this design, but it is here and vindicates its presence by finishing perfectly a smart and comfortable sports dress.

FOOD LABELS ARE OFTEN DECEPTIVE

Misleading pictures and other devices appearing on the labels of food is a form of misbranding against which housewives will do well to be on their guard, say the officials of the Bureau of Chemistry, United States Department of Agriculture, in charge of the enforcement of the Federal food and drugs act. Many prosecutions and seizures are made in the enforcement of the law to prevent this subtle form of misbranding.

Inconspicuous statements in fine print are placed on the illustrated label in many instances to correct ostensibly the misleading features of the picture or other device. However, as the picture or device attracts the attention at once, while the inconspicuous corrective statement can be seen only by a most careful scrutiny of the label, the purchaser is certain to be misled unless attention is directed to the exact wording of the entire label.

The picture of an olive tree and a map of Italy on the label of a bottle of oil leads the average housewife to expect an Italian oil, but a careful reading of the fine print on the label will enable her sometimes to discover that the bottle contains cottonseed oil made in America. Cottonseed oil is a wholesome product; is well able to stand on its own merits, and is cheaper than olive oil.

The picture of a luscious orange on the label of a bottle of imitation orangeade not only adds to the attractiveness of the label, but helps to hypnotize the purchaser into the belief that he is getting the real article, notwithstanding the fact that there is tucked away somewhere in a mass of fine print a little statement to the effect that this most excellent beverage is but an imitation.

Many consumers asking and paying for Arabian coffee accept a package having on the label the picture of an Arab mounted on a fiery steed and imagine they are getting the aroma of the delightful beverage of the Far East, although there is on the label an inconspicuous statement that the coffee in that particular package was produced in South America.

The picture of a maple leaf on a can of syrup carries the fancy to the delicious flavor and sweetness of the product from Vermont, inducing purchasers to pay more than they would pay if they noted the statement in very small type on the bottom of the label that the product is corn syrup flavored with cane.

The use of panel bottles which appear to have a capacity of four ounces of flavoring extract, but which on account of the thickness and contour of the sides can not be made to hold more than two ounces, is an old practice to deceive the housewife in regard to the quantity. Even when the quantity of contents is marked on the bottle, the purchaser is likely to judge the quantity more by the size of the bottle, which is so apparent, than by an inconspicuous statement, which can be seen only by close observation.

A more recent device for making a little bit of pepper or spice look like a whole lot is a six-ounce tin package with a shaker top which, because it can not be removed without destroying the package, prevents the purchaser from observing that there are only two ounces or less in the package.

Deceptive devices appearing on the labels of food or drugs subject to the jurisdiction of the Federal food and drugs act are in violation of that law. The question as to whether any given device is deceptive, and whether the deception is removed by corrective statements appearing elsewhere on the label, is one to be determined by the facts in each case. Many seizures have been effected and many prosecutions maintained because of the use of

REV. LESLIE C. KELLEY TO WED MISS E. WORLEY OF OAKLAND

The Rev. Leslie C. Kelley, formerly of Grace Church, South San Francisco, will be married Tuesday evening, August 26th, in St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Oakland. The bride is Miss Elizabeth Worley, daughter of the late Judge Alfred E. T. Worley of San Francisco. Mr. Kelley and Miss Worley have been acquaintances since grammar school days. Shortly before Mr. Kelley left for Europe in the service, the friendship ripened into the engagement which is about to culminate in marriage. Mr. Kelley will be remembered by many South San Franciscans, in whose civic welfare he took an active interest during his pastorate here.

Safe at Last.

When we were young and in our prime, we had a simply rotten time. We dared not loaf a single second, because the future always beckoned, and when we sneaked a day for fishing we knew 'twas crime against ambition. Now life is beautiful and glorious. No more the future lies before us. Each day for us is simply splendid, because our foolish toil is ended. No more with jobs we're entrusted. We're safe because we're old and busted.—From the Mergenthaler Line O' Type News.

DON'T BE IN A HURRY WITH LITTLE JIM.

Don't be in a hurry with little Jim. God knew 't would take years for a man to grow, He knew the job would be very slow, So don't you be in a hurry with Jim. Perhaps Jim is wasteful, perhaps he is slow, Perhaps doesn't think that his elders know, Well, that's the way God grows a man. If it could be done better (you know God can), He would have tried some other plan. Yes, but He didn't; so don't you fret, Jim stumbles today, but he'll come right yet. God knew 't would take years to grow a man, He knew the job would be slow and long, To grow a man with a will that is strong, A will that will break every stone in his way, A will that will climb to God's mountain height, A will that will bend every force to the right, A will that will bring a new, glorious day; If God can wait for little Jim, Then don't you be in a hurry with him. —Eleanor Scott Sharples in the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

WE'RE GETTING UP TO DATE.

The postoffice in South San Francisco received its first letter destined for airplane mail a few days ago. The letter was bound for Italy and was mailed here too late to catch the mail steamer leaving New York if it traveled across the continent by rail, so at Chicago was placed in the aerial mail for the remainder of its journey to the Atlantic seaport. The entire cost of postage, including registry, was but 21 cents.

No bid or proposal for said bonds will be entertained at less than their face value, together with their accrued interest at the date of delivery, and all bids or proposals submitted will be construed by the Board of Trustees to mean par and accrued interest at date of delivery of said bonds, in addition to the premium offered, whether the bid or proposal sets forth the same explicitly or not. Said check and said amount represented thereby will be forfeited to said city on the failure of such successful bidder so to take up and pay for said bonds in the event the bid or proposal is accepted. Said Board of Trustees reserves the right to reject any and all bids or proposals, and to waive any informality in any bid, as the interest of said city may require. A certified abstract of the proceedings of said bond issue may be had upon application to the City Clerk of said city.

MAY RE-ENLIST WITH OLD ORGANIZATIONS

The War Department, through Major J. H. Page Jr., army recruiting officer for the San Francisco recruiting district, announces that, in furtherance of its policy of increasing the strength of regular army units and the preservation of the spirit which was created in these organizations during the war, men who desire to re-enlist in their old organizations may do so, provided the applicant presents conclusive evidence of honorable discharge since April 1, 1917. In no case will a man be accepted for special assignment under this authority to an organization of the regular army other than that which he shows conclusive evidence that he was discharged from.

The War Department will take steps at once to inform discharged men of their privileges to re-enlist in the organization in which they served, fought, in whose history they have been bound up and in which they will again associate with their former comrades who are still in the service.

Chang is now at Hulings Hospital in Redwood. Attending physicians say he will recover. He was recently graduated as a licensed pilot from an eastern aviation school.

Chang states that he is uncertain what made the machine get unmanageable, but believes that Hoy must have become excited and moved the controls. The two had circled several times over the city and were flying smoothly toward the field to alight, when suddenly the plane plunged to the earth.

TWO ARRESTED BY SAN BRUNO OFFICER

Patrick Slane, claiming to be a San Francisco police officer, and a companion named Thomas Reynolds were lodged in the county jail at Redwood City Tuesday, Slane on a charge of resisting an officer, Reynolds for driving an auto while intoxicated. The arresting officer was City Marshal Ed Meehan of San Bruno. Meehan states that Slane interfered when he was about to gather Reynolds in for driving while drunk. A struggle ensued, but both men were finally subdued by Meehan. Brought before Justice Griffin, Slane was placed under $1500 bail and Reynolds under $2000, which amounts neither were able to furnish.

According to Meehan, Reynolds has a bad record for reckless driving, having been mixed up in an auto accident at Daly City when Gene Reglanti was killed about a year ago and eight months since was implicated in a smash-up at Uncle Tom's Cabin at San Bruno, when two soldiers were seriously injured. Meehan states that three months ago Reynolds turned a large car over in Oakland and killed two persons.

ROOF NEED ATTENTION?

Marvelseal Liquid Roof Cement GUARANTEED FOR TEN YEARS

MARVELSEAL LIQUID ROOF CEMENT is a weatherproof compound for protecting, preserving and renewing roofs and metal siding. Just one coat is needed on any surface. You receive a written guarantee for ten years.

Marvelseal is made from tough, elastic gums, water-proof oils and asbestos fibre. It adheres firmly to the entire surface, forming a tough, tenacious coating. A single coat equals in thickness five to ten coats of paint and in protective value it excels the paint.

FOR ANY KIND OF ROOFING. Marvelseal gives service and protection on metal, composition, shingles, concrete, canvas or gravel roofs. On porous concrete roofs, wood shingles or old composition roofing that has become spongy through injury, wear or neglect, it enters the pores and acts as a powerful preservative, at the same time providing a tough, durable and weathertight coating.

CHEAPER THAN PAINT. With paint, at least two coats are necessary, usually three on porous roofing, doubling or tripling the labor cost and even three coats of paint do not equal in thickness, durability or protection one coat of Marvelseal. Paint must be put on thin. The average paint coat is less than one-hundredth of an inch thick. Even when carefully applied tiny defects enlarge into pinholes, become large bare patches, develop leaks, cause deterioration of the roofing and other ills.

MARVELSEAL IS WEATHERPROOF. It is absolutely rainproof and does not soften and run in hot weather. It is highly elastic and expands and contracts with the surface instead of cracking and peeling like a thin, brittle coat of paint.

STOPS LEAKS. A coat of Marvelseal stops the small leaks which are hard to locate. It seals all small holes and cracks, opened joints, seams, etc. It closes rust holes and checks further corrosion of old tin, iron or galvanized metal practically worn out, permitting added years of service at little cost.

SKILLED LABOR NOT NEEDED. The ordinary laborer can apply Marvelseal rapidly in a continuous, unbroken coating. Only a single application is needed, costing only the fraction of the cost of painting. Put up in colors which have a beautiful and lasting lustre.

Fill out and mail this coupon to-day:

WHY PAY RENT?

A home-owning community has permanence and strength, has character. Its children will make better citizens.

There is no place like home if you own the place you call home. If not, why not?

This end is worth a struggle to attain and to struggle is to be alive.

See us before building.
